LIFE AMONG SALVATIONIST'S

Trials and Triumphs of the Blood and Fire Army.

To be sent about from one post to another, subject to orders from headquarters, with nothing to do but obey, such is the life of the Salvation Army officer. Women as well as men are pledged to strict obedience, and expect no special favor or relief from duty. Staff Captain McAbee, as she prefers to be called—dispensing with her "given" name—knows all there is to be known about obedience to orders and the self-sacrifice that comes with strict discipline.

She is always willing to talk about the work which she does intelligently and well. She is one of the oldest officers in the American branch of the Salvation Army—not in years—for she is still a young, vigorous woman, but in point of the length of her service. The Salvation Army Home for women and children is entirely under her charge, and she reports to her superior in Chicago.

Division Officer Bradley is in command of the Island work only, and has nothing to do with the management of the home.

"How long have you been in the Salvation Army?" Captain McAbee was asked, when she was found looking after the affairs of the institution which, at present, is her chief interest in life.

"Twenty years," she replied smilingly.

"How did you happen to go into the work?"

"I had always an inclination in that direction," she said. "It was, in one sense, an inheritance. We were Methodists. My grandfather was for fifty years one of the circuit riders who preached in western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio. My father was an evangelist, and I was, for a long time, his assistant."

It was self-evident that she must have made a beginning when very young.

"We lived in Alliance, Ohio," she continued. "That was near where McKinley lived, you remember."

It was remembered, and also that he, too, was a good Methodist.

"I worked with my father seven years, and while we were living in Alliance the Army paid the town a visit. It was my first acquaintance with the organization. I attended their open air meetings and saw how they got hold of the drunkards and the people who never went to church."

"It was a very different army in those days," she remarked. "People scoffed at and ridiculed us, and it took real soldier courage to bear all that we were called upon to face."

"I finally felt a distinct call to join them, and my father heartily approved the step. I enlisted formally at Alliance. My two brothers—one of them also a staff captain—and their wives also joined, and are now at different points in the States."

"Where was your first work done?"

"At Steubenville, Ohio, and at Columbus. In Columbus there were some wonderful conversions."

"Do your converts stay converted?"

"Yes, many of them. I recall one case, that is a very good illustration. He had been a drunkard for thirty years. He was a laboring man, a good fellow, well liked, and, but for this love of drink, would have been a superior man. When the Methodists had a revival they would get him out, but after the interest in the meetings was over he went back to his old life. There was nothing to keep him—no organization in the church at that time to help him. The Army came, converted him, he staid sober ten years and died 'shouting happy.'"

"What is your own special line?"

"Spiritual work—preaching, or exhorting at barracks, visiting saloons and this, at the Home, which we call our social work; that is, looking after the bodily needs of those that come to us for help."

"You speak of the saloons—what sort of treatment do you receive there?"

She replied earnestly: "The very best. It is very rare for one of us to be insulted in a saloon; never, indeed, unless the man is very drunk and doesn't really know what he is saying. I have had men come and apologize for rudeness after they became sober and realized what they had done."

In recalling the varied campaigns in which she had engaged, the Staff Captain said that she considered Spokane, in the State of Washington, the greatest field that had been fought over and won.

"It was prophesied that we would fail," she said, "and we were told that threats had been made to hang the first Salvationist that entered the place to a lamp-post. It was after the great fire and the city had all been built up. It was a beautiful place, but filled with gamblers and adventurers and bad characters generally. In fact, it was called 'the Gamblers' Paradise.'"

"As soon as we arrived we went around with our posters to the saloons and business houses. Then we looked up the authorities and told them who we were and what we had come for, and asked them to protect us. It was not so much for ourselves that we feared, but for the property that we were to occupy and for which we were responsible."

"The Mayor asked, 'How many are there of you?' and I told him, 'Just three.'"

"He smiled at the idea of calling such a number as that an army, and said that we needed a regiment. I told him that we would raise our regiment before we left. We held our first meeting in the street, which was blocked. Then the police came and they were very kind. They told the people to keep the street clear, but don't do anything to the Salvation Army."

"There were a great many conversions—one hundred at the end of eight months. I received fifty into the Army in one evening. All kinds of men came over to us, old soldiers, miners, sailors, and the Army has prospered there wonderfully ever since."

The next question was a delicate one, but vitally important to the good Staff Captain. Rather bluntly put, it was: "How have you fared as to funds?"

"We have seen some hard times, of course. I remember one bad winter in California when there was rain in the valleys and snow in the mountains, and nobody had any work. In such a time as that, I have walked along the streets, and I can tell you that the bare-shops smelled good."

"But don't think I've ever gone hungry. I never have. God has always looked after me, and He always will. In the beginning, before we had proved what we were, it was hard to get money. Almost all that was thrown into the tambourine came out of the pockets of poor men. You see, the well to do are business men, and they look on everything from a business man's standpoint. We had to prove ourselves. We have done that and conditions have improved with us."

"How has it been in Honolulu?"

"People here have been very good. But we have had difficulty in meeting our current expenses. Still, I am meeting them. It costs us about $200 a month. I can count on an income of $150, but must contrive to get the rest, somehow, from month to month."

Concerning her travels, Staff Officer McAbee said that she had gone to the Atlantic to the Pacific. She has worked in twenty different States, and in Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Sacramento, Columbus, Ohio; Minneapolis and other cities. As to her journey in Honolulu, she said if her health did not fail she would remain here at least two years.

"I like the work," she said, "amongst girls and women, especially. The children have been received from necessity. We try to reach the girls through their minds as well as their hearts, by appealing to their reason and to their better feelings. We want to convert them, and that is what we try to do."

She courteously went with the reporter to the door, and glancing out into the garden, called in her pleasant voice:

"Children, children, keep out of the sand."

Then she explained that the big sand pile had just been brought, but that she did not want them to play in it "until it had been boxed in, so that they would not scatter it about."

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS

OPPOSE ORIENTALS

The following letter has been received by Superintendent of Public Works Marston Campbell, and has been referred to the Attorney General for his opinion as to whether there has been a violation of the law or not. The Attorney General will make investigation as to the facts alleged:

Honolulu, May 27, 1908.
Mr. Marston Campbell, Superintendent of Public Works, Territory of Hawaii.
Sir: Honolulu Trades and Labor Council, through its president in that behalf duly authorized to act, hereby makes complaint against A. P. McDonald, contractor engaged in the erection and completion of that certain public building known as the "Court House Building," at Wailuku, Maui, under a contract with the Territorial Government, dated September 17, 1907, that he, the said McDonald, has violated the terms and conditions of his said contract, in that he has employed, or knowingly permitted to be employed, in and about the construction of said building, persons other than citizens of the United States, or those eligible to become citizens, contrary to the provisions of Sections 123-124 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii.

And in this behalf, it is more specifically charged, on authoritative information, that the greater portion of the mill work and interior finish in said building, including window, door and casement frames, lattice, gates, etc., and the cutting, smoothing and sandpapering in connection therewith, was done by non-citizen (Oriental) labor, and with the knowledge of the said McDonald, or under his direct procurement.

Wherefore this organization requests that the matters and things therein complained of be taken up and investigated by you, with a view to enforcing the law and protecting the rights of citizen labor; and that, in the event a violation of the law is disclosed, the penalties imposed by statute may be enforced.

The Trades and Labor Council stands ready, and hereby offers, to furnish to you, or to any officer of the Government to whom this matter may be properly referred, the names of competent and credible witnesses to sustain the truth of the charge herein made. Very respectfully,

HONOLULU TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL.

J. F. McLAUGHLIN, President.

FREAR WRITES OF HIS

DOINGS IN WASHINGTON

Acting Governor Mott-Smith received the following letter from Governor Frear by the Alameda mail yesterday.

It was written on the eve of the Governor's departure from Washington for the Mohonk Conference.

"Washington, D. C., May 18, 1908.

"My Dear Ernest: We leave tonight for Lake Mohonk. I have only a minute for a word to you. Last week was so full of conference and social festivities that today is the first time I have had a chance to do much in the departments, and it has been a rushing day. You probably know by this time that the Hilo breakwater contract is to go to Metzger for both supplying rock and placing it. The coastwise law and the second U. S. district judge law may be voted on in the House today. I made a statement on the judgeship bill before the Senate Committee this morning, as did also Mr. Smith.

"I have had a long conference with Secretary Garfield, taking up many matters with him. We are trying to arrange for an architect to go to Honolulu before making the plans for the public building, so as to have the building entirely suited to the locality.

"I received a cablegram the other day from the mercantile bodies in regard to fleet supplies, but have been unable to attend to it. Mr. Hatch and Mr. McClellan will look after that.

"I will have to close now and hurry this to the postoffice. I hope all is going well with you. Very sincerely,

"W. F. FREAR."

Secure seats today for the boxing carnival at the Orpheum. The affair will positively take place.
